The trek to the Khumbu region not only provides close-up views of the highest and most famous peaks on earth, but also provides a glimpse into the way of life in remote sherpa villages and high yak pastures as well as an understanding of the peace and tranquility of traditional Tibetan Buddhist monasteries. Following the footsteps of the conquerors of Mount Everest in a region of breathtaking beauty, trekkers will find themselves in a land whose culture is reminiscent of ancient patterns in Tibet, and where the legendary Yeti still remains an unsolved mystery.

TREKKING SEASON

The trekking season in Nepal is October through May. During the summer months of June, July and August the monsoon rains make the trails slippery and frequent showers and clouds obscure the views of the Himalayan peaks. The trekking season may be divided into three seasons: Fall (October to December), Winter (December to February) and Spring (March to May). During Fall and Spring it can be quite hot in the lowland valleys below 7,000 feet, but the weather is quite comfortable in the higher regions. During the winter season the days are short and then it is quite cold at high elevations, but the low country is very comfortable. A particular attraction in the spring trekking season is the blooming rhododendron with bright red, pink and white blossoms garlanding the hillsides.

TREKKING PERMITS

In addition to a visa (good for one month initially), the trekker must apply for a trekking permit before departing for a trek. The trekking permit may be obtained from the Central Immigration Office, Ram Shah Path (Putali Sadak), Kathmandu after arrival in Nepal. Two passport photos are necessary for the trekking permit, and a fee of Re. 1 plus Rs. 15 for each week of trekking is charged. If the trekker intends to spend more than 30 days on the trek, it is necessary to apply for a visa extension from the same office.

The Central Immigration office is closed on Saturdays and Government holidays.
